An Act to prohibit the importation of domestic animals from outside the United States for purposes of transfer to another and to require uniform data reporting on placement of animals by releasing agencies.

The legislature finds that the risk of disease transmission to animals and humans is greater from animals imported from outside the United States than from animals transferred within the United States. Both species-specific diseases and diseases transmitted from animals to humans (zoonotic diseases) are more frequent in the former group than in the latter group. There is an avoidable risk to the animal and human population of the state caused by the potential spread of animal-borne species specific and zoonotic diseases. There is also a risk to the agricultural interests of the state created by the importation of diseases endemic in other areas of the world, but eradicated in the United States. To protect the health of animals and people within the state, the legislature finds it desirable to prohibit the importation of domestic animals from outside the United States and its territories into the state.

Furthermore, the legislature finds that it is desirable for the public policy of the state to support efforts by public and private agencies responsible for caring for, protecting or adopting out unwanted, lost, or abandoned cats or dogs in the state to place or adopt animals coming into their care. To further this end and to develop accurate and reliable data concerning the number, source and disposition of these unwanted, lost or abandoned cats and dogs in the state, the legislature requires these agencies to make and keep uniform records to enable the state to make policy decisions to improve the placement success rate of dogs from these agencies. The legislature further finds that there exist computer programs that will enable these records to be accurately recorded, easily maintained and provide standardized information.

The regulation shall be based on computerized software systems available and used by releasing agencies in the United States. At a minimum, the following records shall be required to be reported on a monthly basis and shall be kept for a period of five years for all animals received by the releasing agency:

(1) The source of the animal and the means obtained, defined as the total number of animals taken in, divided into species, in the following categories:

(2) Disposition of all animals taken in, divided into species, in a format determined by the Commissioner by regulation. These data must include: adoptions, reclaim by owner, died in kennel, destroyed at the owner's request, transferred to another releasing agency within the state, transferred out of the state into a releasing agency in another state, and the number euthanized. The listing of euthanized animals shall include all animals euthanized with feral cats recorded separately from other cats.

(3) Total euthanasia percentage based on total intake must be presented. The euthanasia percentage shall be calculated by the following formula:
