Global Wildlife Resources has developed a unique approach to humane dog capture & handling. Throughout the course we explore tools, techniques, and attitudes which allow us to work in a calm manner to capture and handle fearful dogs without fighting the dog.

This class is essential training for shelter staff, disaster responders, rescue workers responding to hoarding cases/puppy mills, spay/neuter programs, and those rescuing dogs in general. We are proud to offer this unique course at the Young Williams Animal Center in Knoxville, Tennessee. Register through our GWR website.

The instructor is the dynamic Dr. Mark Johnson of GWR in Bozeman, MT. The course is a product of Dr. Johnson’s experience handling feral (fearful) dogs throughout the world including the Caribbean, India, tribal lands, and rescue operations after Hurricane Katrina. He is also author of the Feral Dog Blog.

The course includes a course notebook and Certificate of Training. No live dogs are used in this course. The course is vibrant with videos, slides, visual aids, and lively discussion. The class is limited to 30 people, so register early! The 2-day course fee is $275. Places in the course are reserved once payment is received.

Register On-line through our GWR website!

For more information and registration form visit our website Course Schedule and Feral Dog Blog.